

I do not believe that the FCC should implement a proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy Laws. This law seems to be very effective.

I used to receive SIX or more "unavailable" calls during the day and evening. Now I receive one or two per WEEK! I can now be almost 100% sure it will not be a salesperson on the other end. I was spending my time in the evenings trying to screen my phone calls, facing the unomfortable situation of explaining that I don't want to try a product even if it is free. I have endured rude salespeople and they've even hung up on me for saying no! Since I became a part of the "no call" list, I no longer have this problem.

I encourage the FCC to refrain from implementing new laws, and to leave Indiana's Telephone Privacy Laws just the way they are. They are having a positive effect on my evenings and personal time. I have seen a huge difference in the numbers of calls I receive.
